Severe Storm Brings But Little Relief from Heat

Thermometers Registering as High as 90 Degrees—Little Damage Reported from Storm Throughout City and County.

The very severe electrical storm accompanied by a heavy rainfall Monday evening caused very little damage in the city and county. Neither did the storm bring relief today from the very oppressive heat wave which struck the city Monday afternoon.

Thermometers throughout the city today were registering as high as 92 degrees while the humidity was unusually high. No prostrations from the heat have been reported. The weather bureau does not report any relief in sight.

The greatest damage from the storm Monday night in the city was caused by heavy rainfall, which inundated cellars and basements. Several washouts were reported in the county. No buildings were reported struck by lightning in the city or county.

The New York Telephone Company reported forty lines and 200 stations out of order. A full crew started the repair work this morning through the district and they expect to remedy the damage by night.

No serious trouble was reported by the Kingston Gas & Electric Company in the city or outlying districts. There were, however, a large number of fuses blown out.

During the storm the trolley cars were tied up by sand which was washed on the tracks on the Broadway hill.

The board of public works has a large crew at work throughout the city repairing a number of depressions in the street.

New York in Grip Of Heat Wave

Heat Threatens to Rival Recent Wave That Killed Fifteen and Prostrated Nearly a Hundred—No Relief in Sight.

New York, Aug. 3.—With continued high humidity and rising temperature New York took off its coat and loosened its collar again today in preparation for another scorching heat wave.

The thermometer rose with the sun to 79, and 84 was predicted for mid-afternoon by the weather bureau. Coupled with a humidity of 83, four degrees higher than yesterday, the heat threatened to rival the recent wave that killed fifteen and prostrated nearly 100 when the mercury reached 97.

No relief is in sight.

American Forced Out of Channel

Miss Barrett of New York Gives Up Attempt to Swim English Channel Within Two Miles of Goal—Best Record Made by Any Woman.

Dover, Eng., Aug. 3.—Clara Barrett, New York school teacher, gave up her attempt to swim the English Channel at 5:25 o'clock this morning when within two miles of Cape Gris-Nez on the French coast.

Miss Barrett wept bitterly when she was lifted into the motor launch which had been chugging patiently behind her ever since 8 o'clock yesterday morning when she started the cross-channel swim. She was completely exhausted.

Miss Barrett had been in the water 21 hours and 40 minutes and had covered 40 miles. This is probably the best record made by any woman in the channel swimming competition and compares favorably with the best records made by male swimmers.

Gertrude Ederle gave up her attempt last year after being in the water eight hours. She covered in that time twenty-three and a half miles.

The launch bearing the exhausted swimmer turned about and put into Dover at 8 o'clock this morning. A large holiday crowd, waiting at the wharf, cheered Miss Barrett enthusiastically.

Miss Barrett is 32 years old. She is the youngest among the channel aspirants, being six feet tall and weighing 210 pounds. She is reported to have been handicapped by lack of funds throughout her preparations. Her period of training was considerably abbreviated because of lack of funds and it was said that for the same reason she was forced to start from the English side, considered by experts "the more difficult side from which to start the swim."

Death Halts 29-Year Vigil

Mrs. Grace Stevenson Has Waited 29 Years for Daughter Who Mysteriously Disappeared From Wealthy Home.

Malden, Mass., Aug. 3.—A vigil of twenty-nine years unswerving, Mrs. Grace Stevenson, 80, has gone to her final rest in Forestdale cemetery, hoping vainly to the last to once more see the daughter who walked out of her parents home in Brookline, the night of April 26, 1897, and never returned.

The daughter was Miss Grace Stevenson, and as she kissed her mother that April night in the nineties, she assured her she was just going for a short stroll. Mother eyes never beheld her again, but mother faith lingered down the years that some day Grace would come back, as she had promised.

Time has failed to solve the mystery of why an attractive girl such as Grace Stevenson was in 1897 should have left her wealthy home to disappear. The mother's hope that she would come back had never dimmed. Then death intervened.

At the funeral service at St. Aidan's church those friends of the family who believed that Grace is still alive looked in vain for a floral tribute from the daughter, but there was none.

Stock Exchange Has Near Riot

As Brokers Rush to Buy General Motor Stock—Stock Soars Ten Points in First Half-Hour.

New York, Aug. 3.—A rush to buy General Motors stock precipitated a near-riot on the floor of the Stock Exchange today as brokers struggled and tugged at each other in a wild scramble to execute their orders.

An overnight gain of 1 1/2 points was only a modest introduction of the boiling market for the stock which developed with the influx of buying orders from all sections of the country.

May Search U. S. Ships Anywhere

Under Decision Handed Down Today by Attorney-General Sargent Gives Coast Guard a New Weapon.

Washington, Aug. 3.—The right of the United States government to search and seize American vessels engaged in illicit trade anywhere on the high seas was upheld today by the Department of Justice.

Under an opinion by Attorney-General Sargent, any vessel of American registry may be seized for violations of the prohibition and customs laws whether or not it is within the territorial waters of the United States.

Sargent's ruling was based on decisions in the Federal Court of Appeals, which upset mandates of lower courts holding that the government may seize American vessels only when they are within the 12-mile limit.

Officials said that the decision places a new and effective weapon in the hands of the Coast Guard in fighting smugglers.

Exposition Plans Changed to Meet Demand for Space

Active Canvass for Sale of Space Begins Wednesday But Already Original Layout Has Been Extended to Meet Requirement of Exhibitors.

The first of a series of three meetings for the benefit of those interested in having exhibits at the Kingston Exhibition will be held this afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Kingston Chamber of Commerce.

The layout of the Exposition has now been definitely determined upon and the various arrangements which have been made will be explained to those in attendance at the meetings.

A special street front is now being constructed for the exposition and from the plans it is evident that the "show" will be much more attractive than any which have been held previously.

It will be so arranged as to be thoroughly typical of the progress which Kingston has made. The front will be erected near the entrance to the Fair Grounds and the tents will stretch the entire distance from near the street to the fence of the baseball park. So many prospective exhibitors have already signified their intention of taking space that already the original layout as planned has been somewhat extended.

This morning a meeting of those engaged in the automobile industry was held and the number who will take booth space is nearly twice the amount originally anticipated. This year the automobiles will be installed in booths with the other exhibits throughout the tents and the auto industry representatives are planning to make a most attractive exhibit.

A miniature sample booth is being built and will in a few days be placed on exhibition in the center of the city in some show window so that prospective exhibitors can visualize the booths and how to decorate them to the best advantage.

Blue prints and photos are on exhibition at the Chamber of Commerce rooms and in a few days a prospectus will be mailed to many prospective participants. The prospectus will contain pictures of typical exhibits and a sketch of the booth, together with the rules and regulations which will govern the Exposition as a whole.

The active canvass for space sale will start tomorrow when committees of the Chamber of Commerce will visit merchants, manufacturers, bankers, professional groups and civic organizations.

FORD'S FOURTEENTH MILLION FLUVER MADE

Another million mark in Ford production was passed on July 21 when Motor No. 14,000,000 came off the assembly line at the Fordson plant of the Ford Motor Company.

Some idea of the present enormous production of Ford cars is obtained when it is recalled that it was only a little more than two years ago, June 4, 1924, that the famous Ten Million Ford was produced. In the twenty-five and a half months elapsing since that time Ford output increased 4,999,999.

The first Model T Ford was turned out on October 1, 1908, and it was not until seven years later, December 10, 1915, that the first million was reached.

Mrs. C. B. O'Reilly Dies at Home

Well Known and Highly Respected in Community Where She Spent Most of Her Life—Successfully Managed Large Estate Despite Many Obstacles.

In the death of Mrs. Cecelia B. O'Reilly at her home, 1 Andrew street, at an early hour this morning, Kingston loses one of its most notable residents. Mrs. O'Reilly was one of the most favorably known and highly respected women in the county, representative of the highest type of womanhood.

She was born on her father's farm at Lopus, Ulster county, the daughter of Nicholas and Mary McNichol Murphy. At an early age she established a business in the old village of Rondout. Later she was married to the late John O'Reilly, her wedding being attended by the prominent people of the village of Rondout, Wiltwyck and Kingston.

On the death of her husband she took over the management of what was then one of the largest estates in this city. Though heavily encumbered with the most obstinate and terrific antagonism, she succeeded so well that her efforts are shown in the works she left behind. On the former O'Reilly estate there now stands the city hall, armory, high school, Benedictine Hospital, Kingston City Hospital, Knights of Columbus building, American Legion Building, New York Telephone Building and a number of fine residences.

Her keen analytical mind and business acumen were always commented upon by lawyers, other professional men and women as well as the business community.

Mrs. O'Reilly lived for God and country. Her interest and efforts were entirely for her children. The surviving relatives are five children, Mary S., wife of N. D. J. Murphy, John and James T. O'Reilly of this city, Cecelia I., wife of Captain L. S. Miller of New York City, now in Europe, and Theresa A., and two grandchildren, Betty and Christopher Murphy of this city.

The late City Judge N. Frank O'Reilly was also her son.

The funeral will be held from her late residence on Friday morning, August 6, at 8:15 o'clock and thence to St. Joseph's Church, where a requiem Mass will be offered for the repose of her soul at 9 o'clock. Interment in the O'Reilly family plot in St. Mary's cemetery.

Primaries in Western States

Oklahoma and Kansas Voters Pick Nominees for United States Senator and Governor.

Oklahoma City, Aug. 3.—J. C. (Iron Jack) Walton, former Governor and commander in chief of all Oklahoma's military and civil forces, came back before the voters of his state today in an effort to gain the Democratic nomination for United States Senate, an honor which he had two years ago only to meet defeat overwhelmingly by E. B. Pine, Republican.

The "Iron man" who in 1923, put the whole of Oklahoma under martial law, called out the national guard, asked for 75,000 volunteers, kept a legislature from meeting by force of arms, appointed "22,000 minute men" to stop an election and set numerous other precedents in a "war against the invisible government of the Ku Klux Klan" and was later impeached, this time opposes four other contestants, one a woman senator who voted to impeach him.

"The Klan must die" is the former governor's campaign slogan.

Kansas Primaries. Topeka, Kans., Aug. 3.—Kansas primaries opened today with weather throughout the state cool and cloudy and no exceptionally heavy vote expected. What interest is manifest is chiefly local in character, with none of the national issues bearing on either senatorial or gubernatorial races. Record breaking wheat harvests throughout the state have killed interest in even the famed "mid-western revolt."

The Democratic voters will choose between ex-Governor Jonathan M. Davis, recently acquitted on charges of selling a pardon while in office, and Donald Muir, for the gubernatorial nomination. Golden B. Davis opposes Governor Ben S. Paulen, who is trying for the Republican nomination to succeed himself. Senator Charles Curtis, Republican floor leader, seeks renomination against a negro, Nick Chiles, of Topeka.

Reviewing the events of the past thirty-six months, the Coolidge mouth-piece analyzed the business and industrial situation at home and the economic situation abroad, and found the United States fully recovered from the devastating effects of the World War and Europe well on the way to recovery.

The double tax reduction effected in the past three years, in the opinion of President Coolidge has been largely responsible for America's healthy condition. Solving of the German reparations problem, he feels, marked Europe's first major stride toward recovery.

Outstanding achievements of the administration were enumerated: Funding of the World War debts. Restoration of relations with Mexico. Adherence to the World Court. The new immigration law. The railroad labor law.

WHY oil in your Ford must do double duty

WHEN your Ford doesn't run smoothly and economically the trouble usually lies not in the car but in the oil that's used. For oil in a Ford has a trying task, a two-fold task, a task that ordinary motor oils are neither designed nor qualified to fulfil.

For unlike a gear-shift car, the Ford system of lubrication makes it necessary for one oil to lubricate both the motor and the transmission—two very different lubrication jobs. Failure to do either job correctly results in chatter, repairs, and uncertain control when you stop, start and reverse.

It was exclusively to meet that dual Ford lubrication problem that Tide Water technologists created Veedol Forzol, which is not simply a different grade of oil but a different kind of oil. Today Veedol Forzol is giving more than a million Ford owners the smooth performance of higher priced cars plus 8 definite economies in operation.

The 8 economies of Veedol Forzol

10 to 25% gasoline saving	Resists heat and friction
Eliminates costly chatter	10 to 25% saving in carbon
10 to 25% saving in oil	Resists fuel dilution
Increased ability to coast	Reduces repair bills

To eliminate chatter; to get smooth, sure control; to enjoy the economies you have a right to expect from your Ford, always use Veedol Forzol. Ask for it by name where you see the familiar orange and black Veedol Forzol sign—the sign of a good dealer.

LURE OF WHALE ATTRACTS YOUTH

Pursuit of Deep Sea Game in North Pacific Draws Many Applicants.

Seattle, Wash.—There may be no more "Moby Dicks" in the ocean depths, but there are hundreds of young Americans who want to go whaling. The offices of two whaling companies here are overwhelmed with applicants for places on this season's whaling fleet.

The New England whaling methods may be a thing of the past, but out on the billows of the north Pacific men and ships still pursue the sea beast. For decades whaling stations have operated along the Alaskan shores, the ships sometimes going 200 miles off shore. The narrow strip hunted when compared to the broad Pacific and other oceanic waters indicates that but a small plot of the whale's domain has been searched in recent years.

Many Ships in Hunt.
Eleven whaling ships are due to sail from here soon. Six are bound for Akutan, Aleutian Islands. Five are destined for a trip to the north-east corner of Siberia, where a concession from the Soviet government permits whales to be killed.

"Thar she blows" is heard no more, for nowadays whales are shot with high-powered modern harpoon guns. Boom! Then a terrific churning of foamy sea water and a whale is tied alongside of the boat. Each means, anything from 40 to 90 barrels of oil at 90 cents per gallon; a lot of whale meat, whale leather, a ton and a half of dried blood and meat for poultry feed, one salted whale's tail for Japan and a ton of bone fertilizer.

Get Fair Wages.
Of course this money does not all go to the crew, but they get fair wages with a bonus. The gunner, the prince of the crew, draws about $100 per month and $12.50 for each whale. During best seasons this means about $500 per month. The captain gets the same. The chief engineer draws $10 for each whale, his assistant $5 and the sailors and firemen $2.50 apiece in addition to regular wages. Thus the crew likes a crack gunner and treats him fine.

The oil is sold to soap manufacturers and for lubricants. The revenue from by-products more than pays the expenses of the whaling operations. In the old New Bedford days only the oil was utilized. Ninety out of 100 whalers are Norwegians.

Scientists Inquisitive, So Bore Volcano Crater.

Honolulu.—Scientists who desire to know more about volcanoes and especially about the Kilauea volcano on the island of Hawaii, are boring a network of holes around the vast crater. The holes are being bored with compressed-air drills, and are ten feet deep. There will be one every 1,000 feet.

Dr. Thomas A. Jagger, in charge of the Kilauea volcano observatory, who is directing the work, expects to learn something about subterranean heat in its relation to volcanic activity.

The holes will be encased around the top and capped so that temperature tests may be made at any time. It is thought that a rise in temperature in the holes may presage an eruption and thus serve as a log of the life of the volcano.

Experimental holes previously drilled disclosed a wide variation in temperature, seemingly without reference to the proximity of Halemauana volcano. This convinced scientists that systematic temperature observations would be valuable.

Cotton Plant Flea Is Discovered by Science

Washington.—That cotton plants have fleas and that cattle, like many unfortunate humans, should also be goldenrod, are two discoveries imparted to the long-suffering farmer today by scientists of the Department of Agriculture.

The cotton flea bites the cotton plant in much the same way that the ordinary flea bites its unwilling host, except that the cotton plant cannot scratch. The result is even more disastrous, however, since the bite kills the buds and growing branch tips of this plant.

Cattle sicken on a goldenrod diet, the scientists say, but they deny the resultant bovine ailment is hay fever. Rayless goldenrod, found chiefly in the West, is said to poison the intruded animal that eats it. Popular belief has it that the poison is transmitted to humans drinking the milk of such cattle, resulting in "milk sickness," but of this scientists are not certain.

School Children Have $30,000,000 in Books

New York.—School boys and girls of the United States now have upward of $30,000,000 on deposit in school savings banks, says Arthur R. Chamberlain, of San Francisco, chairman of the National Education association's national committee on thrift throughout schools of the nation. He presided at the national congress of thrift in Philadelphia.

It is in the schools of New England that the virtue is most generally taught and most avidly practiced, Mr. Chamberlain said. Throughout the Southern states, he asserted, "little attention is given to thrift in the schools."

BORAH CITES HISTORY.

In his argument against the disregard of the Eighteenth amendment by so large a part of the American public Senator Borah cites the fact that Lincoln's devotion to the Constitution was such that he urged all men to support the fugitive slave law. Lincoln stood with the Southern statesmen of the period in this matter because he knew, as all men knew, that the fugitive slave law was a mere elaboration or more explicit statement of that clause in the Constitution, put there in the beginning and still left there, requiring that "no person held to service or labor in one state under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due."

It is true that Lincoln urged good citizens to stand by this part of the Constitution as well as by the other parts, but Senator Borah naturally did not see fit to tell the rest of the story. The fugitive slave law not only caused the "underground railroad" to be more active than ever, but caused abolition leaders in the North to declare that there was "a higher law than the Constitution." William Lloyd Garrison even burnt a copy of the Constitution in public, denouncing it as "a covenant with death and a league with hell." Moreover, twelve Northern and Middle Western States repudiated the Federal fugitive slave law by legislative enactment, thus nullifying a part of the Constitution itself—which led to the secession of eleven Southern States and the war that followed. Altogether, it must be said that, from his point of view, Senator Borah was unfortunate in his historical illustration.

LEPROSY CURED.

A great achievement, due to American medical skill, is reported from the Philippines—nothing less than the curing of many cases of leprosy. It is nearly twenty years since the leper colony was established on the island of Cullion by the American director of public health of that period, who with two assistants went about collecting lepers and taking them to the lonely island: "Those who went first," we read, "were filled with dread. At their new colony, however, they found attention and freedom. Devoted nuns and American doctors treated them. Where before they had been cut off from most activities, they found occupations to keep them busy. They had land for gardens, and the younger ones could study and enjoy themselves in the company of fellow patients. Gradually the word spread through the islands that Cullion was a desirable place for lepers to go to. From their hiding places they came of their own volition."

Meanwhile American scientists kept working to find a real remedy. The earlier experiments with chaulmoogra oil were disappointing, but there was persistence. English and German scientists cooperating in the work of improving the preparation of this substance. Two American doctors in Hawaii made further progress in their work in the leper colony of Molokai. "With the result," according to present reports, "that today this medication is being used with such success that over 20 per cent of the cases show complete cure, and in at least 60 per cent the malady is halted." Well may the world rejoice that this dreadful disease, regarded as incurable for thousands of years, "is at last being conquered."

SNELL'S SOUND SUGGESTION.

Congressman Snell, chairman of the house committee on rules, and one of the ablest Republicans in the state, is among those who contend there are other important issues besides prohibition to be discussed of this fall. He made this very debate the other night of his home in Putnam, where he stated he would give his hearty support to Senator Wadsworth because he believed the Senator was one of the men properly equipped with the ability and experience to pass upon the diversified problems that constantly come before the United States Senate. In giving his reasons for supporting the Senator, Congressman Snell said:

"I believe there are many other propositions before congress now just as important as prohibition and I have been there long enough to know how important it is to have a man there to represent the great state of New York with all its diversified interests, who has character, ability and experience. And Senator Wadsworth certainly has these."

At the same time Congressman Snell denied that he favored a wet referendum but he stated that "inasmuch as this referendum is to be taken I believe that every voter should go to the polls and register his or her desire. I advise all voters to do this. If the drys remain away from the polls an overwhelming wet vote will be returned and this will undoubtedly hurt the prohibition cause throughout the entire nation."

Congressman Snell's is just one more voice added to those which have expressed the opinion that there are many issues which need to be considered just as carefully this fall as prohibition. The effort to make the wet and dry argument the only matter to be determined in November is impossible because there are too many other subjects demanding the attention of the people. While Congressman Snell may not agree with Senator Wadsworth on every question, there is no doubt whatever as to the Congressman's complete respect for Senator Wadsworth's courage, capability and character.

CAUSE OF HEART AILMENTS.

Heart ailments carry off more people than any other single condition. That these ailments can be prevented just as small-pox, yellow fever, malaria, and typhoid can be prevented, is now definitely proven. The New York Association for the Prevention and Relief of Heart Disease has been getting out pamphlets for physicians and the public in general that should go a long way in awakening everybody to the actual facts in this matter.

In a large children's clinic where there were children with frequent attacks of rheumatic fever, these attacks were reduced almost 100 per cent in the children in whom a successful removal of the tonsils had been done.

In one of New York's largest hospitals, where active removal of diseased teeth and tonsils has become popular, there has been a definite reduction in the number of cases of acute rheumatic fever.

Now out of 327 cases of heart disease in the Associated Heart Clinics of New York City, the causative infection was acute rheumatism in 331, and acute tonsillitis in 297. That is practically 2 out of every 3 cases were due to acute rheumatism or tonsillitis.

The other conditions making up the other one third were bad teeth, 163, scarlet fever 78, and the balance to other forms of infection. What is the lesson?

That normal healthy tonsils however large do not cause heart trouble, but infected tonsils, irrespective of size, can do so. As treatment or removal of these tonsils is your only safeguard. As to teeth. The idea of trying to save the grinding teeth because of their chewing surface, even where there is severe infection, is considered criminal by Dr. Price of Cleveland, America's outstanding dentist.

So have your throat examined by your family doctor, and get an X-ray of your teeth by your dentist or some one he recommends, and don't take a chance on heart ailments. There is trouble or there isn't. It is worth your while for your health's sake, yes for your life's sake, to find this out.

Today's Story in New York History

By Franklin A. Godchaux.

Our National Flag First Unfurled Over a Military Camp at Fort Stanwix, August 3, 1777.

On June 14, 1777, Continental Congress resolved "that the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white, in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

The flag was a modification of the so-called "Great Union Flag," used since January 2, 1776, when it was raised in the camp of the Continental army at Cambridge, Mass. Before that time different flags had been used under authority of the several colonies.

The popular story of the actual making of the first American flag is that a committee appointed by Congress to prepare a design for a new flag, consisting of General Washington, John Adams and Colonel George Ross, called upon Mrs. Elizabeth (Betsy) Ross, at her home in Philadelphia, where she carried on her business of making flags for the army and navy, and expert needle work.

The committee asked her if she would make a flag such as was ordered by Congress. She replied that she would try.

They thereupon produced a design rather roughly drawn. Betsy examined the design and noticed that the stars were six-pointed, suggested that a five-pointed star would be more distinctive and appropriate, showing them how a five-pointed star could be made with a single clip of the scissors.

The committee decided that the thirteen stars should be arranged in a circle in a blue field, and General Washington then and there changed the sketch, and soon after a colored design by a painter named William Barret was sent to Mrs. Ross as a sample, whereupon she set to work and completed a flag which was presented to the committee.

There was a tradition in Philadelphia that the flag, as the committee had authorized her, in the name of Congress, to make the flag which was adopted as the emblem of our nation, and our people as a nation, June 14, 1777.

Stripes," as the national flag soon became known, at a military post was at Fort Schuyler, on the site of the city of Rome, N. Y.

The fort was besieged early in August, 1777. The garrison were without a flag, when the enemy appeared, but their pride and indignity soon supplied one in conformity to the pattern adopted by the Continental Congress.

Shirts were cut up to form the white stripes, the red stripes were furnished by the scarlet cloak of one of the women of the garrison, and the blue ground for the stars was composed of portions of a cloth cloak belonging to Captain Abraham Swartout, of Dutchess County, who was then in the fort.

Before sunset on August 2, 1777, the curious makeshift standard, as precise to the beleaguered garrison as the most beautifully-worked flag of silk and needle-work, was hoisted over the southwest bastion of old Fort Stanwix, then called Fort Schuyler.

As this improvised flag was hoisted to the breeze from the bastion, the camp of Colonel St. Ledger's British-Hessian-Tory-Indian army, who had invaded the fort, the drummer beat the assembly and the adjutant read the resolution of Congress ordering the flag of the Republic, up it went. There it swung, free and defiant, until the end of the long struggle on August 22.

It is also claimed by some historians that our national flag was first carried in battle on August 6, 1777.

when General Herkimer won his brilliant victory at Oriskany, but it is popularly agreed that the national flag was first unfurled in battle on the banks of the Brandywine, Pennsylvania, September 11, 1777. The first battle after the official order of Congress was promulgated.

GAS BUGGIES or HEN AND AMY—They're Off.

RAKE AND HOE

"Oh, I've had such a busy day," said the rake to the hoe as they both were put back on the veranda, in their own special corner.

Down below them was a basket in which was a trowel and a fork, and some string and sticks to be used to fasten up flowers which needed a little help at the bottom.

The Little Red Watering Pot

"I heard the same about myself," said the hoe. "I heard that I was to have a companion, too."

"You see," said the rake, "Helen loves her garden and she has grown up enough to use the big tools. But now George is big enough to work in the garden, too."

"The little red watering pot belongs to him, you know."

"And I heard them say that tomorrow they were going to give George a rake of his own."

"The rake would be such a big fellow as I am. But it will be just right for George. It will be a good one."

"Yes, and I heard that George was to have a hoe, too. So we will each have a smaller hoe and rake to look after."

"It will be fun to see the tools. I always like young, small tools."

"They make me feel a bit old and grown-up and all that sort of thing in one way."

"Tot in another way they make me feel young."

"They have so much to do with younger people and they work in such a whole-hearted young fashion that I feel better for their companionship."

"Just the way I feel," said the rake. "But I must tell you about the busy day I had today."

"I was so busy doing the garden paths. You know the garden paths have been fearfully neglected lately."

"There has been so much to do in the garden and when there is a great deal of work to be done the garden paths are neglected somewhat."

"The work on them is put off for another time. But you know how the garden paths treat that neglect!"

"They show the people! They go around, or rather, I should say, they send around invitations to all the weeds to come and see them."

"This is the way their invitation reads:

"Weeds! Weeds! Weeds!

"The Garden Paths will be at home from daylight to dark, and through the evenings, too, from now on for some time to come."

"We hope you will be able to accept our invitation to visit us and to stay as long as you can."

"We will welcome you."

"Now, of course, when the garden paths say that they invite the weeds to stay as long as they can, they are inviting them to stay until they are dug up. But the weeds do not blame the garden paths for that."

"The garden paths are hospitable right up to the very end."

"But at last the family had got at their garden paths and had weeded them, and I raked over the newly weeded garden paths, and they look simply fine."

"Yes, like, if I do say so myself, they look simply fine. Then I raked (with the assistance of a member of the family) the small paths in the lawn, too."

"Well, I don't know how much more I can say."

"I am sure you need attention, these beans."

"But I love a busy day."

"Oh, so do I," said the rake. "And won't it be fun when our companions come?"

"And the hoe said: 'I'm pleased as could be in its dirty, dusty, pleasant way.'"

"What Mother Promised"

"That's a nice boy," said the victor, as little Betty picked up his scattered toys. "I expect your mother has promised you something if you clean up the room?"

"You mean if I don't?" he corrected.

"How Little Betty Differ"

Teacher (in class)—What is the difference between a student and a child?

Pupil—Well, the student gets his lessons.

"My Aunt Emily, who has been dead these twenty years, was in some ways a comfortable woman and in other ways a thoroughly uncomfortable one," stated old Harriet P. Bang. "For one thing, she didn't believe that the average old woman knew more about medicine than a doctor who had made it his life study. For another thing, she didn't believe that the boys were all going to the college and the girls were all literary whippers. And, lastly, she did not think the utility of her day was any greater today than that of 1875. But, as I say, she has been gone to her reward twenty years."

SHEDS NEW LIGHT ON URBAN GROWTH

Writer Makes Point as to Drift From Farms.

That the urbanization of the United States has not been so rapid as a casual reading of the census figures seems to indicate, is the contention of Robert W. McCullough in the Survey. Admitting that the relative decline of the rural population was marked between 1880 and 1920, he argues that the drift from the farms to the big cities has not been what is popularly supposed.

Use by the census bureau of the term "urban" to classify villages and towns of more than 2,500 inhabitants is misleading in that "urban" is usually thought of in connection with cities, whereas when this classification is subdivided it appears that growth has been by no means equal among villages, towns and cities of different sizes.

Many places formerly classed as rural, as their population was less than 2,500, have passed into the "urban" classification merely because their population now exceeds that figure. A part of the urban growth, therefore, may be said to be in reality a mere bookkeeping transaction.

Between 1880 and 1920 about 4,620,000 people passed from the rural to the urban classification without ever leaving their homes. Instead of the large cities receiving the bigger part of increase, places having from 25,000 to 100,000 population had the greater gain. Mr. McCullough also shows that the bulk of the immigrants settle in urban regions. They add to the bookkeeping increase of urban population without representing a loss from the rural regions. Making deductions for this element, the urban increase rate drops from 83.4 per cent to 32.1 per cent. The corrected rate of increase for the rural population is 23.8 per cent, which is about equal to the normal increase of births over deaths.

Interesting as are these figures, they should not be taken as indicating that the cityward trend has been checked. The back-to-the-farm movement has never been really popular, and the lure of towns and cities, even if only in the 25,000 to 100,000 class, continues to be as strong as to be a problem of national importance.

It is true that mechanical devices have greatly increased the agricultural output in proportion to the number of agricultural laborers, thus liberating a certain proportion of the farm population.

Old Manuscripts Verified

The Roerich museum of New York announced that an expedition sent from the museum has verified the existence of manuscripts in the Hemis monastery of Ladak written during the life of Christ and relating his travels and preaching in India, Tibet and Central Asia. The expedition, which has been in Chinese Turkestan since 1923, was detained in that region by the Daotai of Khotan. The members were later released after their weapons were confiscated by the native government. It is the opinion of the museum that the manuscripts at Ladak will throw much light on the vague years of the life of Jesus before his return to Jerusalem in his twenty-ninth year. Many are skeptical as to the authenticity of any such manuscripts.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Representative Gilbert N. Haugen said in Washington the other day:

"The men who block the Corn Belt's demands offer us very fine explanations and excuses. Well, they remind me of an anecdote."

"A married man at a shore hotel, tried to kiss a pretty girl, but she pushed him off and said:

"How dare you try to kiss me? Only this afternoon I saw you kissing your wife. And I heard you tell her, too, that she was all the world to you."

"Yes, that's right," the man answered calmly, for he was full of explanations and excuses. "There are two worlds, you know. With in the old world, you are the new one."

A Gentleman by Nature

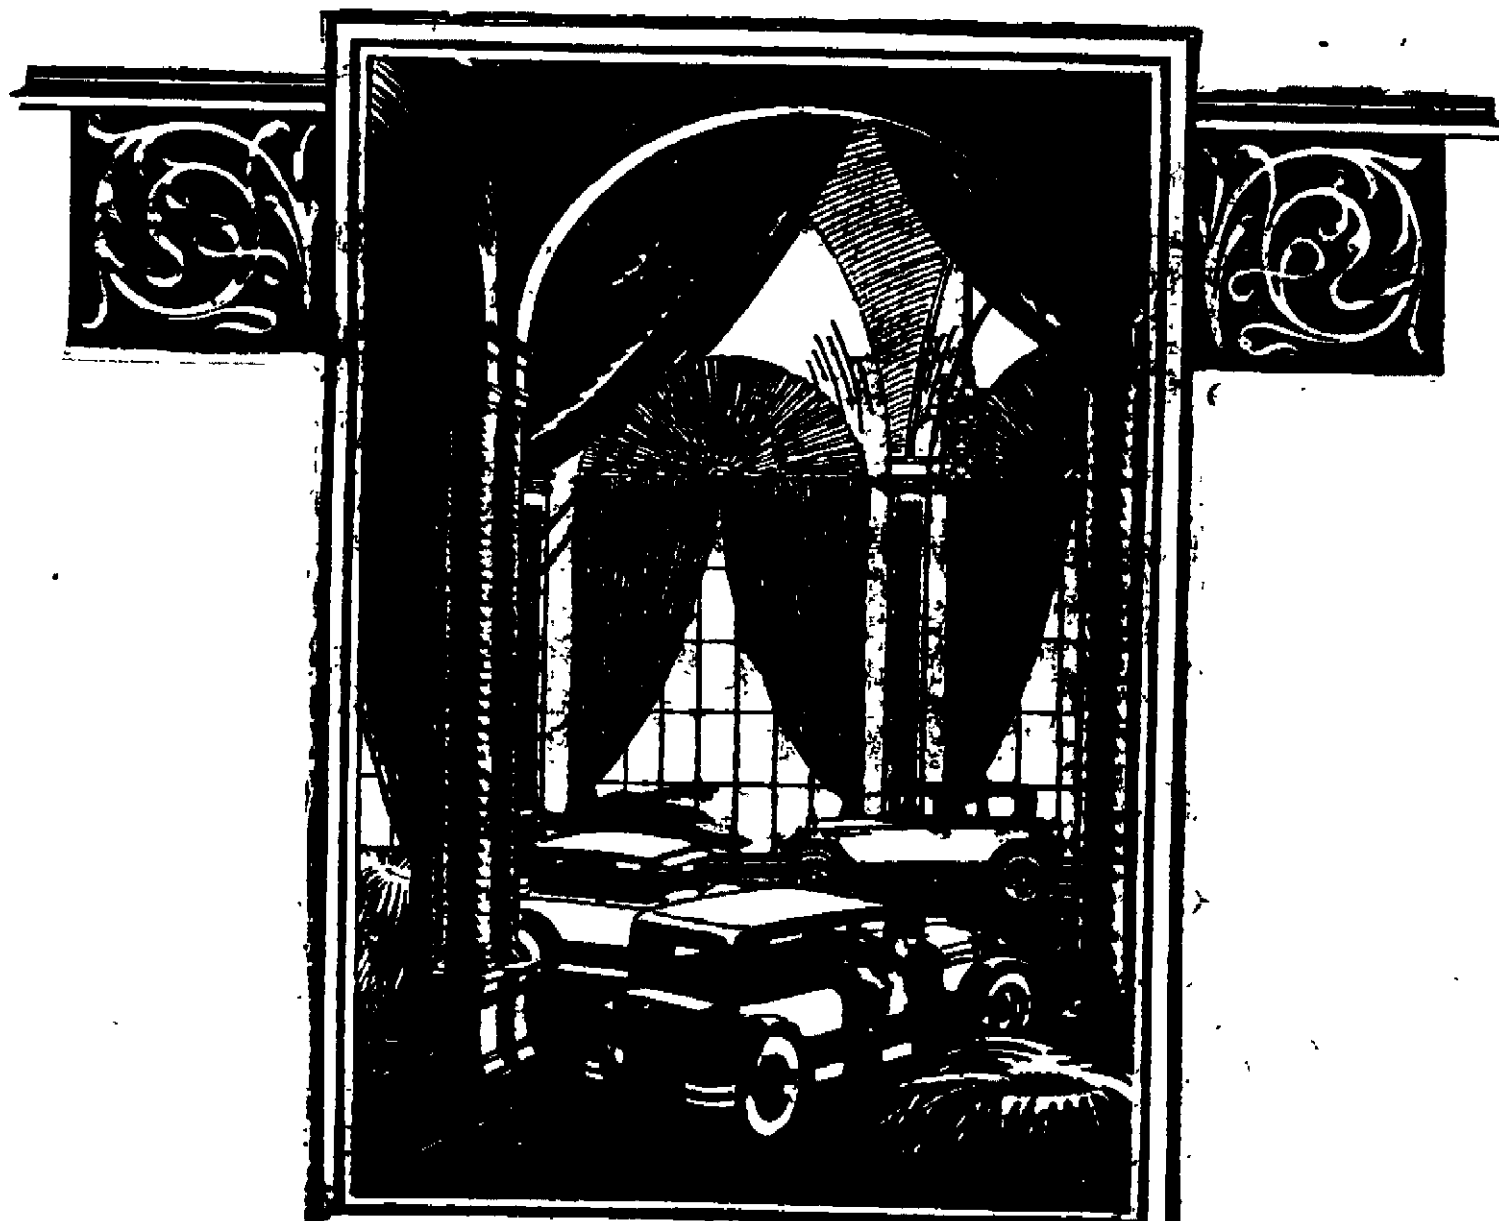

He that can enjoy the intimacy of the great and on so occasion dignify them by familiarity, or disgrace himself by servility, proves that he is as perfect a gentleman by nature as his companions are by rank.—Cajton.

Started Popular Phrase

The term "simon pure," to distinguish the genuine from the false, was taken from the principal character of Mrs. Centilevre's comedy, "A Bold Stroke for a Wife," who finally won a rival who had assumed his name.

Court Affirms Corbett Sentence

John Corbett, who was arrested some time ago on the Strand on a charge of disorderly conduct and using indecent language on the streets, will have to serve his sentence of three months in the Albany Penitentiary. An appeal was taken to County Judge Fowler from the conviction in city court but the conviction was affirmed by the higher court. Corbett, who has been out on bail pending the decision of the appeal, was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Ellsworth Monday and placed in the county jail pending his transfer to Albany. Chris J. Flanagan appeared for Corbett and argued the appeal.

Wide Trousers With Us Next Fall, Experts Say

Philadelphia.—The tendency in neck-cloth styles for young men the coming fall will be toward slightly more body-trading lines with a less extended and square shoulder. Waistcoats will be a trifle higher cut and with slightly longer points. Wide trousers will continue to predominate. This is set forth in the report of the joint style committee representing the International Association of Clothing Designers and the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers.

The report was submitted recently to the annual convention of the International Association of Clothing Designers. In the opinion of the committee, the popular coat for young men next fall and winter will be a smart, three-button model, cut on lines as described above, 29½ inches long and having a wide semi-peak lapel with round corners. Regarding overcoats the report says:

"The Chesterfield overcoat with velvet collar, 47 front 46 inches long, will be in great demand. A raglan overcoat with liberal shoulder effect will be featured in many lines. Topcoats will be cut along the lines of the heavy-weight overcoats."

Instant Relief From Bunions-Soft Corns

No sensible person will continue to suffer from those intense, agonizing, throbbing bunion pains when the new powerful penetrating yet harmless antiseptic Emerald Oil can readily be obtained at any well stocked drug store.

Apply a few drops over the inflamed swollen joint and see how speedily the pain disappears. A few more applications and the swollen joint is reduced to normal.

So marvelously powerful is Emerald Oil that soft corns seem to shrivel right up and drop off. Wm. F. Dedrick's guarantee it and is dispensing it to many foot sufferers.

WIDESPREAD QUAKES SHOW EARTH STRAIN, SAYS EXPERT

Recent Disturbances Indicate Readjustment, in Opinion of Commander Hook of Geodetic Survey.

Washington.—"Recent seismic activity, as demonstrated by the numerous earthquakes that have been recorded on seismographs in all parts of the world, indicates that we are now passing through a period of widespread earthquake distribution." This is the opinion of Commander M. H. Hook, chief of the bureau of terrestrial magnetism and seismology of the United States coast and geodetic survey.

"All this activity," he said, "indicates a very general relief of strain in many parts of the earth. It is not impossible that in some cases there is a relation, as for example, a passing earthquake wave may act as a trigger to set off an earthquake which is about ready to occur at some distance from the original quake. Seismologists are not entirely agreed on this possibility.

"Reports of activity have been exceptionally numerous and this has complicated the recording of instrumental results. The reports received from seismograph stations at Cheltenham, Md.; West Bromwich, England; Fordham, N. Y.; Georgetown, D. C.; Ottawa, Ont.; Sitka, Alaska, and Victoria, B. C., of the recent eastern Mediterranean earthquake placed the epicenter near the island of Crete. The exact epicenter or point of greatest activity can best be determined by nearby European instruments.

"The recent Sumatra earthquake was reported only by Georgetown. The distance agreed with the position of the island of Sumatra."

Alaska Not Dreary Waste as Depicted in Films

Tunana, Alaska.—Ice and snow with dreary wastes of frozen ground through which ice-blocked streams move sluggishly—the popular conception of the Arctic circle—are not always what the visitor sees in part of Alaska that maps designate as being in the frigid zone.

Bewildering as it might be to one whose knowledge of the northland has been gotten from movies portraying fur-hooded Eskimos rushing over snow crusts when it is summer everywhere else, the visitor to the Koyukuk river region would find from May to September, prolific gardens cultivated by white men.

There—within the Arctic circle—are long days of sunshine during June, July and August, including a full month ending July 7 in which the sun never sets and from the middle of May to the coming of frosts in September vegetation grows luxuriantly.

Trust to Pictures

In these days of haste and bustle, hyper-activity and constant "go," there is one thing that every one can do to neutralize to some extent the restlessness that has invaded our life. That one thing is to surround oneself with beautiful and restful pictures. Pictures take the mind off the worrisome, petty details that are so irritating to the nervous system. A good-natured Jolly Cavalier to look down on us understandingly from the wall, or a lovely Madonna to fill us with peace and contentment are like real companions and friends, and have an advantage that even the best friends do not have; they make no demands and expect no favors; they are always equally dependable and ever ready to serve.

Honesty Still Best Policy

Why are nice women nice? Because of the knowledge that being nice pays, and is easier than being tough. The greatest sermon ever written, or ever will be written, is that honesty is the best policy. No one man wrote this sermon; all men lived, proved it. Those who violate the sermon know better; they are actuated by meanness, recklessness. Many of them are put in jail; a few hanged; all punished in one way or another.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Deadliest Wound

A wound from a tongue is worse than a wound from the sword; the latter affects only the body—the former, the spirit, the soul.—Pythagoras.

In the summer of 1888, Alexander Macdonald, Navigator for trader and explorer, crossed the Rocky mountains and what is now British Columbia, and came out upon the Pacific coast on June 22. He was the first white man to reach this continent by a route north of Mexico. At that very time Captain Vancouver was exploring and charting the coast of British Columbia.

Tuxedo Prominent as Paris Fashion

Double-Breasted Suit for Women's Wear Is Practically Ignored.

Concerted effort of Parisian designers to popularize for feminine evening wear the metallic fabric tuxedo or "smoking," as they classify it, is exerting an unexpected influence on the tailored styles. The double-breasted suit for general wear is practically ignored here, says a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Times, the Parisian tailored suit being designed almost like the masculine single-breasted dinner jacket. It has the long rolled silk lapel and is made with the exaggerated form-fitting waistline Frenchmen affect.

The skirt is usually plaited, though certain models made in black cheviot throughout, have narrow, straight skirts, braided on the side seams as trousers are braided and pressed with a line down either front, in imitation of trouser pressings. The skirt with this very earnest garment is as soberly masculine as the suit, and the collar is of the stiff, wing variety. The suit gains in distinction from the wrap worn over it—a wrap that is very much in vogue, copied to the last detail after a man's flowing opera cape.

As a rule, however, the tuxedo for the street is not so faithful in its masculine details. Usually the plaited skirt is in a lighter or darker material than the coat, a checked navy blue and white skirt being especially favored. Shirts and collars are of soft silk and are not too strictly tailored.

Tuxedos in the Paris collections are designed primarily for semi-formal evening wear and are made accordingly in the most brilliant metallic fabrics, though some few for the daintier or late afternoon are of cloth, trimmed only with lace. Yvonne Davidson makes one of these less conspicuous models in peach-beige kasha with the usual tuxedo jacket and a skirt with fullness concentrated in a cluster of inverted plaits at the center front. The jacket reveals, its splendor only when it is opened. It is lined with a white-gold lame used for the revers as well. The blouse with this suit is of gold lame with a ruff collar and cuffs made of the lame in the finest of plaidings.

Quite in line with the idea of creating evening costumes always as component parts of an ensemble, Jenny has made a cavalier cape of emerald-green velvet lined in gold lame and collared in Russian sable to wear over her "smoking" costume. The jacket of this suit is in gold lame with a green undertone, and the skirt is of plaited gold cloth. The blouse worn under the jacket is of fine handkerchief linen, with a stock collar and ruffled gilet of the same material edged with lace.

Tan Bangkok Sport Hat Is Turned Up in Back

Showing a charming little sport hat of tan bangkok, turned up in the back, with tan and blue grosgrain band, and plaited trimming.

Neck Decorations May Be Any of Many Styles

Several new styles in collars are seen. The bateau, which suffered a temporary eclipse—last season—is once more in style, and in some evening and afternoon gowns is cut wider, to touch the tip of each shoulder. The dropped neckline is also fashionable and is seen much in the evening gowns cut after the idea of the robe de style. Martial et Armand use a graceful rousing neck with a beehive collar, and Jeanne Lanvin and Patou are cutting some of their smart frocks for daytime to a V. Chantal has designed a new and distinctly fetching collar of white organdie, cut like a robe.

Evening Contrasts

The ensemble idea has extended to the more formal evening costume. Some of these severe striking individuality by means of color contrasts. The dresses themselves are usually of lustrous fabrics. Over this is worn a light velvet coat of a contrasting color. Pink is frequently combined with green or Mediterranean blue, brown with coral, and mauve with emerald green.

Cold Feet

"Do you suffer from cold feet?" the doctor asked the young wife.
"Yes," she replied.
"Be persuaded to wear my new socks," he said.
"Oh," she replied demurely, "they're not—my socks."

Named by Captain Cook

New South Wales, in Australia, was so named by its discoverer, the famous Captain Cook, in 1770, because he thought it bore a remarkable resemblance to the northern shore of the British channel, South Wales.
